U.S., China pressure Soviets to withdraw

PEKING, Jan. 20 (Agencies) — The United States and China have put more pressure on the Soviet Union to withdraw from Afghanistan. President Carter Sunday asked the U.S. Olympic Committee to boycott the Moscow Olympics this summer, or move them to another city, if Moscow does oot pull out within a month. Earlier, Peking broke off its normalization talks with Moscow, calling them "inappropriate" after the invastion. Carter, appearing on the NBC network television program "Meet the Press," said it was "important that the world realize the seriousness' of the Soviet move into Afghanistan. He cited an Olympic boycott as a way of undersooring U.S. concerns.

The president suggested that the Olympics could be moved to some other city or canceled entirely if the Soviet forces remain in Afghanistan.

A Foreign Ministry official in Peking said: "The Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan threatens world peace and China's security, creating new obstacles to normalizing relations between the two countries."

Responding to questions about the talks, he said: "In such circumstances, it goes without saying that it is inappropriate to hold Sino-Soviet talks."

It was not clear from the statement in what circumstances the talks might resume.

Diplomats had the impression the talks would be delayed, but not terminated.

They said China oow took the view that stern action was needed to face what the People's Daily called "the Soviet act of aggression against Afghanistan,"

China has called for withdrawal. The Afghan crisis was a major topic at talks hetween Chinese leaders and U.S. Defense Secretary Harold Brown recently in Peking. Both sides agreed on the need to strengthen Pakistan and Foreign Minister Huang Hua is in Islamabad to demonstrate Peking's sup-

Syria, PLO 'neutral' on Soviet move

BEIRUT, Jan. 20 (AP) - The Palestine Liberation Organization and Syria are neutral toward the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, the bead of the PLO's Political Department Farouk Kaddoumi was quoted Sunday as declaring.

'We are trying to adopt a position of positive neutrality." Kaddoumi told the Beirut English-language magazine Monday Morning in an interview." We are in principle opposed to the intervention ... our position and Syria's are the same."

While stressing neutrality on Afghanistan. Kaddoumi explained that the PLO does not want to "he involved in any international conflict.

Rather, be said, the Palestinian commando movement prefers to "concentrate our attention, our political efforts and our military struggle in our occupied territories." The PLO is the umbrella organization for eight commando groups, some of which are with pro-Soviet tendencies. At least two groups - the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine - have defended the Soviet action in Afghanistan. Observers believe the neutral position taken by the PLO's leadership was prompted by Chairman Yasser Arafat's strong bonds with Saudi Arabia. Saudi Arabia, is leading a pan-Arah drive against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Commenting on a statement attributed to Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin that the Palestinians would create a pro-Soviet state on the West. Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip, Kaddoumi said the "future Palestinian state can never be a Communist state."

However, Kaddoumi denounced the anti-Soviet campaign on Afghanistan becuase, he said, it is aimed at overshadowing the Arab-Israeli conflict and diverting attention from the projected normalization of Egyptian-Israeli relations, which is scheduled to start

The anti-Soviet campaign, Kaddoumi said, was also aimed at luring the Arab and Islamie states into mustering a new alliance to sup-plant the defunct Central Treaty Organiza-

Riots erupt at Israeli soccer match

TEL AVIV, Jan. 20 (AP) - About 5,000 Palestinian soccer spectators shouting ""Khomeini" and "Allah Is Great" stormed the field where their team was playing a Jew-isb squad in a weekend game, injuring six policemen and four civilians, Police used tear gas, warning shots, and an armored van to break up the riot, and police spokesman Eli Zilber said Sunday 41 Palestinians had been arrested in an all-night roundup after the Saturday riot in the Galilee village of Um El-Fahm.

"This is more than the usual sporting soc-cer riot," said a police source. "The Jewish players had to barricade themselves in their locker room for two bours while the Palestinians tried to batter down the doors."

Violence is a commonplace at Israeli soccer matches, where fans hurl rocks, bottles, and even firecrackers at opposing teams almost weekly. But Saturday's violence bad a sharply political cast, because it involved a clash hetween Palestinian and Jewish players. The violence was touched off when the referee disallowed a Palestinian goal because of an off-sides offense. A fight flared between the referee and the Palestinian shooter, and the mob stormed to his defense, burling Zilber said the crowd howled "Khomeini, Khomeini," and "Allah Akhbar - God Is Great." Jewish players said they also cried anti-Israeli slogans "down with Zionism," and "this is our land." They chased the Jewish team members into the iron-doored locker room, and when police came to the rescue the rioters trashed five police cars.

"I hope this isn't blown up into an Arab-Jewish issue," said Um El-Fahm sports official Ahmad Jabrin, Arab and Jewish teams play each other weekly with no trouble, But police officials believed that the anti-Israeli cries and the severity of the riot gave it politi-

China, Pakistan discuss Soviet intervention

ISLAMABAD, Jan. 20 (Agencies) -Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua began discussions with the Pakistani government Saturday on ways to counter the Soviet Union's push into Afghanistan.

A foreign ministry spokesman said Huang met President Zia Ul-Haq's foreign affairs adviser, Agha Shahi, to discuss recent regional developments and assess each country's response to last month's Soviet intervention.

Huang told reporters on bis arrival Friday night that he was confident his visit would lead to closer ties of friendship and cooperation between China and Pakistan.

He said be would brief the Pakistani government on his talks with United States Defense Secretary Harold Brown in Peking earlier this month.

Informed sources said Huang was expected to tell the Pakistanis that China would send more light weapons and artillery but up-todate warplanes and tanks could be purchased only from the West,

China would also explain that Pakistan could not expect Chinese troops to come to its defense if the Soviet Union moved against the frontier, the sources added.

China is Pakistan's closest ally and chief source of arms,

Huang was scheduled to meet Zia Sunday evening after his visit to an Afghan refugee camp at Aza Khel, about 100 kilometers east of Pakistan's border with Afghanistan. Some 433,000 Afghans bave crossed the border in the past 18 months.

Meanwhile, a leading Pakistani religious leader has announced the formation of a "Jihad" — holy war — committee in Lahore, about 110 kilometers southeast of here, in aid of Afghan guerrillas fighting the Soviethacked regime in Kahul.

Maulana Mufti Mahmoud, former president of the banned Pakistan Nanonal Alliance Party, demanded in a speech at a Lahore mosque Friday that Pakistan withdraw its ambassadors from Moscow and Kabul, close roads leading to landlocked Afghanistan, send troops to the border and give all-out support to the Afghan "Mujahideen" (holy war crusaders).

There has been no official reaction from Zia's martial law regime, which says it has given bumanitarian aid to the Afghan rebels. However, the foreign ministry did issue a formal denial of Indian news reports that seven Pakistani army divisions including armored units bad been rushed to the Afghan border since the Soviet-backed coup Dec. 27. A spokesman called these reports "totally baseless," and said a broadcast by the government-run All-India Radio accusing America and China of arming Afghan rebels was "unfounded and malicious."

China has given substantial military and economic aid to Pakistan - more than $ 2 billion in assistance since the mid-1960s,

Sadat fosters military ties with America

CAIRO, Jan. 20 (OFNS) - Joint exercise by the Egyptian and American air forces have added a new dimension to the blossoming defense links between Cairo and Washing-

The Egyptians, who see themselves as one day replacing Israel as America's chief ally in the region, have been deliberately vague about the exercises, hinting that combat aircraft were used. American officials in Cairoexplain that what was actually involved was a number of exercises using AWACs (airborne warning and control systems), sophisticated electronic surveillance equipment that is carried in modified Boeing 707s.

The Americans say they deployed the AWACs, apparently successfully, to plug a surveillance gap from Libya to the Red Sea that cannot be covered by their Indian Ocean and Mediterranean fleets. The AWACs were flown from Egyptian bases in the Western Desert and Upper Egypt near Aswan.

The success of the exercises poses a dilemma for President Sadat. If he permits them on a regular basis, the Americans will want to set up ground stations manned by their own technicians. It will be the nearest Egypt has come to signing a formal military treaty with the United States and could call into question its continued membership of the nonaligned world.

On the other band, Sadat, already the intended recipient of more than $3 billion in American military aid, wishes to maintain strong ties with Washington. He also sees the continued deployment of AWACs from Egyptian territory as a way of supplementing the country's own radar early warning system, which was installed with Soviet help more than 15 years ago. The Egyptians would like to buy, or hire, AWACs for themselves. They bave been sensitive about the inadequacies of their system since an incident last summer, when border tensions with Libya were at their peak. While Egyptian and Libyan soldiers were locked in confrontation, two Soviet belicopter carriers, the Moscva and Leningrad, anchored just outside territorial waters. From there helicopters equipped with decoys regularly crossed into Egyptian airspace and easily outmaneuvered attempts to track them.

The objective of the Soviet exercise was apparently to warn the Egyptians against attacking Libya. It also illustrated the weakness of Egypt's border defenses and bow easily they could be crossed. Since then the ministry of defense bas been searching for a better warning system.

The AWACs may provide a solution, but Washington is reluctant to sell them because of their secret electronic gadgetry. The deposed Shah's request for AWACs was turned down for fear that they might fall into Soviet hands.

America has enough nuts without Iran

By Martha Hamilton

WASHINGTON — Cutting another he to Iran, the United States is moving toward pistachio self-sufficiency, perhaps as early as 1981.

Iran used to be America's leading pistachio supplier. But this month, as part of their escalating confrontation with the United States, the Iranians announced that they were cutting off exports.

American growers, were ready, even eager and for reasons far removed from international politics.

Mostly as an unlikely result of the tax reform act of 1969, the San Joaquin Valley of California is blooming with pistachio trees, just beginning to shower the red-shelled nuts on U.S. markets.

Tax tinkering in 1969 wiped out favorable tax treatment of citrus and almond groves and sent some growers scurrying for other shelters, including pistachio trees. The trees, planted in record numbers in the early 1970s, take seven to eight years to begin producing. Thus they are now maturing at a time when the United States might otherwise face pistachio starvation.

California growers this year harvested an estimated 17.2 million pounds of the nuts, up strikingly from the 1978 harvest of 2.5 million and more than half the average U.S. consumption according to U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) economists.

"We're getting pretty close to meeting U.S. needs," said Guy Grenier, an economist with USDA's foreign agricultural service. "In two to three years, we'll have self-sufficiency in production."

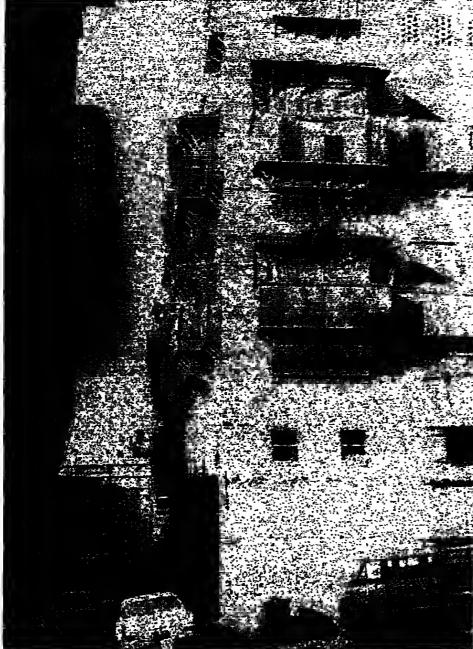

Early in the year Iranians exported large quantities of pistachios bere. "Since then, the rate has plummeted. After the hostages were taken on Nov. 4, U.S. longshoremen refused to unload cargo, including pistachios.

The economic war against the U.S. reached

The economic war against the U.S. reached the pistachio stage on Dec. 12, the day the Tehran Times reported the export cutoff. Besides Iran, Turkey is the other major exporter of pistachios.

"We have enough nnts now, and hy about 1990 we should have doubled what Iran produce," said Lockwood. An estimated 31,000 acres of pistachios are expected to produce 93 to 125 million pounds, she said. Iran's current average production is about 50 million pounds.

California growers always expected to take over the U.S. market, but nurmoil in Iran made their move more timely and may help open other markets, Loekwood said. "Because of the Iranian situation we've been approached by other countries. European countries, the Australians and Japan are coming to us saying they can't get anything from

"He knew the small, walled town by the sea as well as he now knows the compound in Hannes."

Iran. Because of that we're introducing the world to a better quality nnt," said Lockwood.

California growers, a group dominated by five large farm companies including a Superior Oil Co. subsidiary, gave credit to mechanization for the quality of their pistachios.

Pistachios come in a wet bull that must be removed within 24 hours or it stains the shells hlack and splotchy, said Lockwood. In Iran, where most of the harvest is done by hand, the nuts are dyed to cover up the nusightly splotches. American pistachios, in contrast, are shaken swiftly from the tree by a mechanlcal hand that drops them into a contrivance similar in appearance to an inverted umbrella. From there, they move onto a con-veyor belt to be shelled within six bours and refrigerated.

Before 1969, few growers had thought much about pistachios. Only a few trees had been raised on an experimental basis, using stock from Iran, Turkey and Afghanistan. Besides the tax appeal, the boom was bolstered by Agriculture Department reports in the early 1970s that the trees were relatively resistant to disease and pests and by pistachios' potential as a profitable speciality crop.

This year, with the crop coming into its own, the growers retain a public relations firm to speak for them, and legislation is pending in the California legislature to create a commission to assess pistachio growers for research and marketing of their crop, along the lines of citrus and avocado promotion.

Our man on the spot

By John Close

JEDDAH. He has already drafted four typed pages of a hypothetical interview, so eager is he to help. It reads like a one-act play.

Excellency Dr. Fadhil Kabbani,

As chairman of the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency, you are the most informed person who could tell us something about the Agency.

A. I
(raising a deprecating hand) Well, let me tell you first of all, I am not the most informed person about the agency.

"In Kansas, a father says — I used to walk six miles to school every day through five feet of snow — Here, I say I used to get water for the family from three places; cisterns, wells, usually brackish, and from the Jeddah condenser."

The house is quiet. Through the translucent curtains, about 30 children can be seen racing around the bright blue of a pool. The room is dark. What light there is catches on the dozens of pieces of Damascus furniture inlaid with ivory and mother-of-pearl. The only interruption is the padding footsteps of a servant bringing a glass of Pensi servant bringing a glass of Pepsi.

Kahbani readily departs from the script, shaping his memories into soliloquies. He is obviously pleased to bave an audience.

"Noundary" he says nith a thin emile. "I

"Nowadays," be says with a thin smile, "I don't like to go downtown: too many cars, too many people rushing around making money." He remembers 1941, when there were ten cars in Jeddah.

"In Kansas, a father says, 'I used to walk six miles to school every day through five feet of snow.' Here, I say, I used to get water for the family from three places; eisterns, wells, usually brackish, and from the Jeddah coodenser. I remember carrying large tins of kerosene and gasoline back to our house."

Somehow, it isn't "count-your-hiessings time." He pulls at his memories until with a deft twist, the knot comes undone. His anecdotes are not meant to be didactic, they're just good stories.

As a boy, he knew the small, walled town by the sea as well as he now knows the compound in Hamra. His father, one of Jeddah's only doctors, took his son everywhere, to the African village of Ruweis about eight kilometers from the city walls, to dinner with Sharif Hussein. Pleased at the nicety of the observation, he says, I have been to dinner with six kings," from Hussein, to his son, Sbeikh Ali, to King Abdul Aziz, King Faisal, and King Khaled.

He remembers when Jeddah panicked after the fall of Taif to the Ikhwan in 1925, people racing to the port, the streets clogged with donkey carts, dust and fear. He remembers the three, single-engined planes trying to take off to defend the city and the relief when it was all over and they were all still alive.

Kahhani went on to become the first Saudi ever to earn a bachelor of science degree. After his graduation from an English university in 1941, he came home to work as the first Saudi mining engineer at the gold workings of Mahd Al-Dbahab, south of Medina, then the country's only mine. After a short time with the government during the war as a statistician, be left for the Colorado School of Getting a doctorate from Colorado was as difficult then as now. "I remember a student ahead of me, straight A's, had been there four years, whose thesis was turned down because his studies proved his bypothesis was wrong. They told us we had to come up with something positive. I said, If I had the brains to do that, I wouldn't be bere, I'd be out making millions."

After an extra year of study, he did come up with a something positive; the application of sympathetic detonation to mining whereby a series of charges are induced to from a chain reaction, saving time and money. He found that if the charges were placed no less than five feet apart and insulated by layers of coarse sand, the danger of premature explosions could be minimized.

He came home in 1954 as assistant deputy minister under Abdullab Tariki, who was later instrumental in the founding of OPEC. Kabbani muses for a moment at the mendon of Tariki's name, and selects his words slowly. "I remember him as a man who was difficult to get along with, though extremely competent. He would always keep fast to his first impression of you so you only had one chance." Later, under Sheikh Abmad Zaki Yamani, whom Kabbani describes as "a true diplomat", he was promoted to deputy minister.

In 1969, Kabbani led the Saudi delegation to the IAE. He served on the board from 1972 to 1974 and is to retire later this year as chairman.

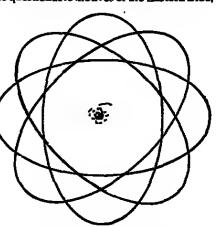

The IAE, formed in 1957, is a forum for nuclear research. It brings together countries who are working on similar projecs, sponsors science conferences and gives advice to foundations and government research centers. After the signing of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in 1970, its mandate suddenly expanded. It now makes surprise inspections of nuclear plants in countries who are party to the treaty.

There are 110 countries represented at the Vienna headquarters of the IAE. With Third World ambifions so closely used to nuclear power, the West fearful of proliferation, and the questionable motives of the Eastern Bloc, Kabbani spends much of his time keep the organization from degenerating into one large complaints department.

"It has been interesting trying to please everyone."

When he turns to the possibilines of nuclear power, he comes alive. He sits on the edge of the couch, his eyes hright. He begins to sound like a 19th century industrialist; railways through Africa, dams across the Nile, plantations of ripening tea.

"People just refuse to realize what importance it has for us. Radiation treatment for plants to make them quadruple their yield, radioactive isotopes making diagnosis a new art, tuclear plants giving electricity. Time is short", he says, warming to his subject. "Why, five years ago the cost of a nuclear plant was one-fifth what it is today. I have trouble convincing people here that it has to be done. There is simply no alternative to nuclear power."

He sits back, slightly tired. "Oh, and about that memo I gave you. You don't have to keep to it exactly, you know."

SUPERPOWER CHANGES

An apprehensive world, fearing radical changes in the modes of internatioanl relations and a new scramble by the superpowers to stake their claims to new spheres of influence as well as consolidating their bolds on ones already in hand, looks from the grim Brezhnev Doctrine which has been implemented on several occasions now to the yet declared Carter Doctrine.

The developments in Afghanistan, it is now becoming clear, dramatic enough in themselves though they might be, are pointers to the fact that the age of detente is nearing its end, that the pressure of events has at last burst through the unstable structure of interlocking interests which stabilized the relations between the two superpowers up to now. The change will soon reflect itself on the political, military, geographical and economic levels. e United States is preparing itself for the presidential elections in which either a new president is elected to the White House, or the same president reelected. In either case, the country's foreign policies are expected to take new directions, especially where it concerns the problems of the Middle East, with all the repercussions A parallel change is expected in the Soviet Union, where the aging (and physically ailing) Brezhnev-Kosygin is nearing the end of its term. There is already strong speculation that the invasion of Afghanistan was a sign that the reign of power is already slipping from their hands; and that the Kremlin hawks are at the moment making all the running. The coming conference of the Communist ment. An early test for the two new lines is expected to be Yugoslavia, where the end of the Tita regiod will see a revival of American-Soviet contention over the country. The grim joke going the rounds at the moment is whether Tito had his American or Russian leg amputated.

Party of the Soviet Union is expected to get the seal on this develop-

Detente had also created an atmosphere in which the European powers, mainly France and the Federal Republic of Germany, were able to begin charting their own courses in international politics. The end of this phase will mean an increasing pressure on them to align themselves clearly with the American line. The reluctance shown by France and Germany to follow America's lead in its attempt to counteract the Soviet expansion shows that they will not after their policies without a struggle. And when they do so, the chance of a "third force" able to mediate between the superpowers will be stifled for a long time.

The most dangerous area of confrontation for the superpowers will be the Middle East. But here, far from the Arab and Muslim countries concerned preparing themselves for the added instability this will cause, the danger is of splits into camps reflecting the East-West division. This trend seems to have started already, and it is expected to connoue until the Egyptian-Israeli "peace process" finally collapses, or until the Americans finally abandon the Camp David approach, whose divisiveness and unworkability have been more than amply demonstrated.

Death of the 1970s-style detente

By Gregory Treverton

LONDON -World events like the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan are bard to measure without the perspective of history. In one light, the last three weeks is the latest round of the Great Game of the 19th century. In another it is reminiscent of Czechoslovakia in 1968. In still another it seems a turning point: not a return to the Cold War by any sensible meaning of the term but perhaps the end of one period, if not yet clearly the beginning of a new

It continues to look as if the Soviet intervention was driven primarily by local considerations rooted in Russian preoccupation with borders. The Amin government clearly was failing, though apparently not on the verge of collapse. Moscow's direct stakes had been growing since the Taraki coup of April 1978 and Soviet leaders must have calculated that they eventually would be compelled to escalate their presence yet again. Sooner may have seemed better than later, and more troops rather than fewer, in an effort to control the situation quickly.

Against these local considerations, the larger costs of invasion must have seemed bearable, especially if it could be over soon. Moscow surely saw the prevailing mood in the United States, and in Europe only slightly less, and decided that East-West relations were cooling in any case. In November, or earlier when planning for the invasion began, it was not as clear as it became later that SALT II was not going to be ratified in 1980. There is no need to speculate about Brezhnev's failing position to surmise that cautionary political arguments about the risk of intervention would have been weakened by circumstances.

There is one catch and one disquieting question associated with this interpretation of Soviet action. The catch is whether they can pull it off. If large numbers of Soviet troops remain ded down in Afghanistan and the fighting continues, the political costs to them will rise.

The disturbing question is why the Soviets acted now, Amin was failing but not about to fall. Moscow evidently decided it needed a much larger measure of control over Afghanistan, now. That suggests interests beyond Afghanistan, not the beginning of a push for warm water ports; that is nonsense. Yet Moscow must at least want insurance - which usually means over-insurance - against the unpredictable effects of the next turn in Iran and, perhaps, a position from which to take advantage of any targets of opportunity that might arise.

Washington's problem is the lack of appropriate responses. Pressures arising from American domestic politics and the 1980 election play role but a small one. So does any post-Vietnam reluctance to use military force.

The lesson Soviet leaders should be taught is that intervendons such as Afghanistan are costly; that implies trying to raise the costs they face on the ground. Providing arms and aid to Afghan rebels would fill the bill, but it would not be easy. American aid could not - indeed should not - be kept secret, but it could only be provided through Pakistan. That would carry a great risk for Pakistan of peing subjected to cross-Soviet or Afghan troops.

The American actions announced so far - curtailments of grain sales, credits and exports of high technology items - will hurt the Soviet Union, especially grain. But they are general and punitive, with little bite on the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

What is striking about Afghanistan, and sugges-dive of larger trends, is that both superpowers appear to have come to the same view of their relatious. They both see Soviet-American detente as very thin indeed.

That does not mean a return to the Cold War of the 1950s. Aware of how far we have to go, we sometimes rorget how far we have come since those dark days. East-West relations in Europe are markedly more stable now than then. And if the superpowers have not worked out rules to govern their global contest, they have at least come to crude rules of engagement. Both are cautious in confronting each other, especially directly and with military

Afghanistan may mark the death of the period of detente that began in the early 1970s. If the superpowers are to move beyond crude rules of engagement, they will have to find now ways of doing so in a more and more chaotic world. And there is tha danger, perceptible already in the instance of Afghanistan, that Europe and America will diverge. Europe retains concrete interests in European detente that are much less visible to the United States. After fretting for several years about an America that seemed too weak in the face of the Soviet threat, Europeans may soon worry that America is too tough, too prone to emphasize military strength. - (OFNS)

The American dilemma in the Middle East

We are told that we can expect few willing decisions from the United States government for another year. For this is election year and even when the election result is known it will take many months, they say, before new initiatives on foreign policy can be expected. Worse still, some tell us that during election year such decisions as are taken will be calculated to win votes at home rather than friends in the world.

What a tragedy this will be for the world, and for America too.

And nowhere is the giant's temporary impotence more apparent or more dangerous than in the Mid-

Just over 12 years ago the United States endorsed unanimous international agreement on Middle East policy (United Nations Security Council Resolution 242) supported by the Soviet Union, Egypt, Jordan and then by Saudi Arabia and Syria and Israel too, as well as by all the members of the Security Council. The Resolution had two principal purposes - "withdrawal of Israeli forces from territories occupied in the recent conflict" and "the right of every state in the area to live in peace within secure and recognized boundaries free from threats or acts of force". Withdrawal to security. Those were the two essential aims. The policy was clear, positive, balanced and internationally agreed.

Now in facing the election year - the year of to new decisions - bow sad to see that the U.S. has shifted from the accepted unanimous policy of 12 years ago - shifted not in words but in action. Now with the need to rally international support for the release of the American bostages in Iran and to organize opposition to the Russian invasion of Afghanistan, the U.S. finds itself in a false position on the international issue which means most to the Arab and Muslim world. The U.S. at this critical time increases its massive supplies of arms and money to Israel not to carry out the agreed aims of 1967 but, on the contrary, to enable the present weak Israeli government to push ahead with the annexation of East Jerusalem and the colonization of Arab lands on the West Bank and Gaza, a policy obviously likely to inflame the world of Islam against the West. Sure enough this is not the purpose of United States actions, but it is certainly the result of them.

The New Year announcement from Washington is that another $ 200 million has been found to support Israel, that is in addition to the annual allotment of $1,785 million, plus the $2,200 million in Ameican loans to finance the Israeli redeployment from Sinai in the Negev under the Camp David peace treaty.

This must be the largest grant of military and economic aid from one country to another ever

There is no doubt about the intentions of the present Israeli government. Prime Minister Begin pnt his signature to the Camp David document which started by stating support for the Security Council Resolution 242 "in all its parts" but he at once made it clear that he challeneged the basic principle of the Resolution regarding the "inadmissibility of acquisition of territory by war" and he has not disguised his real intention to annex occupied Palestine territory. And it is this publicly declared Israeli policy which is now being put into effect with the help of thousands of millions of U.S. dollars.

The fact plain for all to see is that the U.S. government is in effect giving practical support to a government pledged to pursue policies which the U.S. government has publicly deplored.

Surely this is an indefensible, indeed a humiliating, position for the U.S. and one of frustration for everyone else, and it is this that makes the year of no decision so alarming.

What is more the new addition allocation of $ 200 million has not nearly satisfied Israeli demands. The new allocation has been declared in Israel to be quite inadequate. So the U.S. is faced with mounting Israeli demands for arms and money without satisfying the demand, and at the same time seeing its aims and money used for purposes which the U.S. government itself opposes, purposes which moreover cause the strongest resentment and opposition throughout the Arab and Muslim world. So what can be done?

Surely the action required is a return to the policy agreed by everyone in 1967 - withdrawal to security. There is nothing to prevent the U.S. going back to what it originally agreed and from which it has never publicly retreated.

But the withdrawal from occupied territories must be genuine. True the secure and recognized boundaries betdefined - preferably by a boundary commission. But what is not tolerable is for Israel to go on flouting all world opinion by pressing ahead with its present policy of annexation.

And if the U.S. government is unwilling to take a new initiative in election year then it seems that Western Europe is in the best position to go back to the Security Council with a new resolution, not altering the principles adopted in 1967 but adding to them - adding provisions for implementation. including a boundary commission, a timetable for Israeli withdrawal, a period (say two years) of United Nations trusteeship, Palestinian elections and a final peace treaty between all concerned.

The exact terms of this the second resolution would require intensive negotiations with all concerned, the best place for that being the Security Council where all concerned can be heard and participate in what should lead to full agreement on the second resolution to supplement the Resolution of

A year or two ago George Ball wrote an article in Foreign Affairs called "How to save Israel in spite of berself'. Perhaps be might write another on how the U.S. can be saved in spite of election year. What we now need is an independent international initiative for a new resolution to be unanimous like the first. I do not doubt that the American people wish to see a settlement in the Middle East which respects the rights of Palestinians as well as Israelis, that they still support the policy of withdrawal to security, that they long for a lasting peace with American itation restored. The urgent danger now is that these purposes will be lost by a disastrous delay.

In an interview with the East German party newspaper News Deutschland, the president of the GDR'a "Solidarity Committee," Kurt Seibt, named the countries in which East Germany has a special interest.

He said East Germany provided these and other countries with $150 million in 1979 through socalled voluntary donations by the population.

The East German government usually increases the amount collected in donations by 50 per cent from state funds. In addition, special projects costing $225 million have been undertaken, such as the reconstruction of the Vietnamese city of Vinh and the construction and manning of "specialist schools' in various countries.

Not included in these figures is the aid provided through the training of young people. In 1979 more than 1,600 Vietnamese passed through East German training centers and about 750 such trainees came from southern Africa — members of the Patriotic Front and of SWAPO.

Financial aid is low compared to that of the West. Far more important, in the eyes of the GDR, is the training of young people and their indoctrination.

The paper also gave front-page treatment to the reported amputation of Yugoslav President Tito's left leg after further deterioration in his condition. Okaz highlighted Qatar sand Djibouti's boycott of the Olympics in Moscow and quoted newspaper reports as saying that Chinese forces have started entering Afghanistan.

The reported American confirmation of the Saudi Arabian Oil and Mineral Resources Minister's predictions of abundant oil reserves figured prominently on the front page of Al Medina.

O! Houphouet-Boigny

An island of success

ABIDJAN - Felix Houphouet-Boigny presides over one of West Africa's most prosperous nations with a mixture of astute political maneuvering and stern paternalism that has made him one of Africa's most dur-

After 20 years in power, the 74-year-old president of the Ivory Coast still displays independence of mind and almost legendary cantion. Both have served him well in leading this former French colony.

Yet, as many here are quick to point out, Houphouet-Boigny remains a man who "keeps things very close to his vest," an approach that may account for political stability in a nation with numerous tribal and ethnic differences.

Outside of two tribal uprisings in the 1960s that the French military helped crush, a couple of alleged military coup plots and some student unrest, the Ivory Coast has enjoyed almost two decades of steady economic growth and political peace under Houphouet-Boigny.

"He has a consensus among the educated on his rule," said a Western source with long experience in Francophone Africa. "They are in basic agreement with the route he has taken and have a vested interested in keeping it this way."

Born to a line of chiefs of the Baoule people, Houphouet-Boigny was four years old when the French captured his central Ivorian village of Yamoussoukro. The entire country was subjected in 1917. He went to a colonial school in Dakar, Senegal, and became a rural paramedic in 1925.

As a health aide in the colonial service, Houphouet-Boigny travelled around the interior of the Ivory Coast and made contact with the country's numerous ethnic groups, something rare for Africans under colonial administration. It was an experience that would reap him many benefits when he set out to weld his country into a political unit.

In 1940, after inheriting extensive tracts of land from a maternal uncle, he hecame one of the richest coffee farmers in the country. Font years later, Houphouet-Boigny emerged as the leader of the African Agricultural Trade Union, an association formed to fight preferential trade policies for French coffee planters and the practice of forced African labor on French-owned plantations.

In 19 relatively tranquil years, the Ivory Coast has progressed from a backwater of France's colonial emire to become one of black Africa's premier examples of prosperity and stability.

In Africa, where many newly independent states have undergone destructive upheavals or had elected governments overthrown in hloody military coups, the Ivory Coast has survived the taut ethnic and tribal rivalries that have left other states in economic ruins,

Houphouet-Boigny has run the country through tight control over a pervasive, paternalistic one-party system of government that

Now, in line with a trend toward political Now, in line with a trend toward political liberalization in West Africa, Houphouet-Boigny has announced that he will reform the structure of the Democratic Party of the Ivory Coast to allow more grass-roots participation in the country's affairs.

Since independence, all political candidates for the 120-member National Assembly and mynicipal officer have been above.

hly and municipal offices have been chosen by the party's 70-member Political Bureau, which is dominated by Houphouet-Boigny. In the Dec. 7 independence day speech in which he ahnounced the reforms, the president struck a rare populist theme. The generally conservative Houphouet-Boigny told thousands of Ivorians that the time had come to decentralize the party's control in the county. The speech's theme has generated excited speculation among the country's 7.5 million people.

We have become a mature people," said Houphouet-Boigny, "and the people should

The revamping of the party will take place by June and be followed by national elections in the fall. Houphouet-Boigny said he will be a candidate for re-election. Houphouet-Boigny's decision follows closely the return of elected civilian rule in two neighboring countries, Ghana and Nigeria, in September and October. It is unclear whether the well-publicized changes had any impact on the Ivorian leader's decision, but it is clear the transitions did not go unnoticed here.

"We have had a problem of national unity," said one of Houphouet-Boigny's closest political associates, Mathieu Ekra. "That is why the party was given so much power and some people may have ahused it.
"But now, the idea of belonging to one nation has been achieved, so the tight controis can he loosened." Because it has one of Africa's few successful economies, the Ivory Coast has attracted cheap African labor from its neighbors and a large community of French citizens whose positions and high salaries have caused some resentment here. As in many Third World countries, the political and economic fortunes of the lvory Coast have been organized around one man and his philosophy of a mixed economy of state-run enterprises and capitalism.

With cash crops of coffee and cocoa, the Ivory Coast has enjoyed a dramatic average economic growth rate of 7 per cent annually, the highest in black Africa. Its annual per capita income of $ 1,100, also the highest, is the most equitably distributed in all of Africa, according to the World Bank.

Unlike a number of his neighbors,

Houphouet-Boigny resisted the general post-independence rusb to industrialize and concentrated his government's efforts on agricultural growth. While his neighbors fledging industrial efforts and economies faltered, the Ivory Coast prospered.

Almost 2 million Africans have flocked into the Ivory Coast for low-paying work on the coffee and cocoa plantations and in Abidjan. Many have come from the country's poorer neighbors, such as Ghana, Mali, they compete with some Ivorians for jobs their presence has not caused any major unrest while the economy has remained rob-

Japan's spies passed information on China; security is tightened

TOKYO, Jan. 20 (R) — Three alleged Japanese spies gave the Soviet Union secrets on the military situatinn in China collected by Japan and the United States, police said.

After day-long questioning of the three men arrested in Japan's biggest spy scatdal since World War II police said the information passed to Snviet military attache Colonel Yuri Kozlov was largely about China. Some of the intelligence had heen jointly analysed by Japan and the U.S.

A retired army general, whn specialized in intelligence, and two serving members of army intelligence units were arrested hy police in a case which Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira described as "shocking to both Japan and the United States."

As a result of the incident, police raided Japan self-defense force offices looking for evidence in the burgeoning spy scandal

Describing the incident as an "unprecedented police raid on a government office," Kyodo News Service said detectives searched the desks and lockers of the two officers, both employees of the defense agency's intelligence division. There was no report on what, if anything, was found.

In addition to the raid, Ohira nrdered strict measures to be taken to tighten security. Defense Agency Director-General Kenji Kubota imposed tough discipline to reinforce secrecy in the army, and a special committee is to be set up to block further leaks.

Kubota is due to meet Ohira nn today, and political sources said the defense chief may have to resign.

Kozlov and his wife left fnr Moscow on a Soviet airliner a few hours after he was named by police. His embassy, which denied he was involved in the spy case, told the foreign ministry he left suddenly because his mother was critically ill.

The embassy turned down a request for him to submit to questioning, claiming diplomatic immunity.

Foreign ministry sources said the embassy was told the colonel's departure could be taken as an indicatinn of his possible involvement, and that he would not be permitted to return in Japan.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 20 (R) — NATO diplomats have long considered Yugoslavia withnut President Tito as potentially the most dangerous East-West flash point in Europe.

But NATO officials carefully avoid dramatizing the situation, saying there is no sign that Moscow is poised to intervene in Yugoslavia's internal affairs at the moment. NATO intelligence officers say they have not detected Warsaw Pact troop movements near Yugoslavia except for some routine maneuvers planned in Hungary's Pecs area. NATO has refrained from issuing any solemn warning partly because Yugoslavia is outside the Atlantic pact's houndaries and partly because it could give Moscow propaganda for a claim that the West was ready to interfere in a non-aligned country.

The officials say that, if such a warning were to be given, it would come better from individual Western governments and above all the United States.

NATO political and military leaders dn not envisage a Soviet action in Yugoslavia to be taken in isolation. Rather they see such a move in the context of heightened tension caused by a confrontation in the Third World. NATO's top commander in Europe, Gen.

Bernard Rogers, told a news conference earlier this month that he believed a possible scenario for an East-West conflict would start with a confrontation outside NATO and then move into NATO.

"But I do not believe that the Afghan crisis would activate such a scenario..." he said. However, NATO officials warn about the so-called "multiplier effect" of crisis.

Nervousness about Yugoslavia comes on top of the Iranian crisis and the general cooling of U.S.-Soviet relations already noticeable before the Kabul airlift late last month.

They stress the serious danger to NATO's "soft" southern flank of a Soviet push through Yugoslavia nr even pressures strong enough nn Belgrade to make it abandon its non-aligned stand.

By acquiring bases on the Adriatic coast, the Soviet navy would be in a position to disrupt allied sealanes and communications and to isolate Greece and Turkey from the rest of the alliance, NATO diplomats say.

Only the Gnrizia Pass, between the Alps and the Mediterranean, would stand between Soviet troops stationed in Western Yugoslavia and the rich plain of northern Italy. A Soviet move would also bring increased pressure on Greece which shares a long bor-

For this reason, NATO is redoubling efforts to find a solution to Greco-Turkish differences and bring Greece back into the NATO integrated military structure that it left in protest against the 1974 Turkish invasion of Cyprus.

Douglas believed the Constitution and especially its Bill of Rights was sacrosance. He stuck to his creed that stated, "The American government is premised on the theory that if the mind of man is to be free, his ideas, his beliefs, his philosophy must be placed beyond the reach of government.

Qatar, Djibouti to boycott Games

.w. RIYADH, Jan. 20 (Agencies) — Qatar and Djibouo have decided to boycott the Olympic Games in Moscow next summer. Saudi Radio reported the decision by the w two countries was to protest Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Saudi Arabia was the first country to boycott the games.

in New York, the National Football Founand Hall of Fame has voted to support President Carter if he decides that the United States should withdraw from the Games, Vincent Depaul Draddy, chairman of the board of directors of the foundation, issued a statement saying "the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame stands for Americanism, patriotism, sportsmanship and fair play. We resent the attitude of the Russian government and their iovasion of a poor defenseless country. We support the president's stand for a boycott of the Olympic Games to Moscow.

"In view of Russia's cootinued cooduct of aggression, we believe that the Olympic Games should be moved elsewhere, eveo if this means postponement of the Games for a year until suitable arrangements can be Writing in the Sunday newspaper News of the world Bnkovsky said ordinary Soviet citizens already face hardship and suffering because of the Games. He appealed for a Western boycott.

"Going ahead with the Olumpics in Moscow would give approval to this oppressive and aggressive regime," he wrote.

"It would mean supplying it with much needed hard currency to finance further military veotures. It would give the Soviets the opportunity to use the Olympics as a rostrum for political propaganda. It would prove that sport goes hand in hand with politics, moving far away from moral values,"

Bukovsky, 37, spent 12 years in prison before his exile in 1977 and is at Cambridge. He said Olympic construction has created housing and food shortages for ordinary Russians. Dissidents have been rounded up and face up to 10 years in jail in a crackdown on those who might disturb "the idyllic picture"

Unknown Mitchell leads Phoenix

Longshot Jeff Mitchell, who has yet to win in four years of Professional Golfers' Associaoon tour activity, birdied two of his last three holes for a 69 and clone-stroke lead Saturday in the Phoenix Open golf tournament.

Mitchell, 25 who has never led after three rounds, had a 54-hole total of 205, eight shots under par on the rain-drenched, stormlashed 6.726-yard Phoenix Country Club

"It's a new experience, but it's an experience I like," said Mitchell, a Lubbock, Texas,

Playing in the last three-some on the course, he took the lead alone with a hirdie on the last hole, moving out of a tie with veteran Hubert

Green, well established as one of golf's more accomplished performers, shot a 68 in the chilly weather that occasionally produced drizzling rain from gray, gloomy clouds, He was a single shot back at 206 going into Sunday's final round.

"It was cold and wer and the ball always seemed to have mud on it." said Hubert, who won two titles last season and had 16 for his career. "It didn't make it a lot of fun.

"And I have a touch of flu. I'm not complaining, however-I'm playing pretty good

It came under difficult conditions, In addition to the chilly showers, the course was dotted with pools and puddles of casual water, a residue of a Friday storm that caused an overnight postponement in the completion of the second round.

That round was finished Saturday morning and the third round started about an hour

Tied for third, three shots back at 208 were Rod Curl, second-round leader Jack Renner, Mike Sullivan and veteran Charles Coody. Coody and Curl matched par 71, Sullivan shot 72 and Renner 73.

U.S. plans more grain purchases to aid farmers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP) — The Carter administration has announced that the U.S. government will buy more grain from American farmers to absorb surpluses resulting from the curtailment of shipments to the Soviet Union.

White House aides announced Saturday that President Jimmy Carter also is moving to relieve congestinn in grain shipments caused by the refusal of union dockworkers to load ships bound for the Soviet Union with supplies unaffected by the partial trade embargn. Aides said Carter has ordered a government agency, the Commodity Credit Corp., to purchase corn that is clogging the grain pipeline because of the boycott by the International Longshoremen's Association (ILA). Earlier in the week, Carter had urged 1LA President Thnmas Gleason to end the boycott by the $0,000-member union, but it remained intact Saturday.

Aldes alsn said the Food Fnr Peace program will be increased by 451,000 tnns of grain in each of the next two years, so thet some of the grain that had been intended for the Soviets will go tn refugees and poor coun-

Egypt discusses Luxembourg ties

CAIRO, Jan. 20 (R) - Deputy Prime Minister of Luxembourg, Gaston Thorn, Saturday discussed with Egyptian Economie minister Hamed Sayeh bilateral economie relations, the official Middle East News

Agency (MENA) said. Thorn, whn is also his country's minister of foreign affairs and economy discussed Egypt's ties with the European Economic Community (EEC) and possible economic assistance to be extended to Egypt In the New Year, MENA said.

Thorn who arrived here earlier Saturday will meet other officials during his stuy.

ize the stockpiling of 4 million tons of wheat, originally destined for the Soviet Union, in a food security reserve."

Smart Eizenstat, the President's chief domestic pulley adviser, said the actions were being taken primarily because of the ILA boycott and "not for the lows caucuses."

Democrats in the corn-producing state will eboose Monday night among delegates pledged in Carter, Senator Edward M. Kennedy, California Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr. as Democratic Party Presidential candidates, or those listing themselves as "uncommitted,"

In an apparently related move, the Agriculture Department announced it is going to buy more chickens in baces of keeping market prices from falling because of the balt in poultry sales to the Russians.

The department said It will use the chickens in its school lunch pringram as well its food assistance programs fur hospitals, nursing homes and other institutions.

Poultry farmers have expressed concern that chicken prices would drop markedly because of Carter's Jan. 4 suspension of much U.S. trade with the Soviet Union in reprisal for that nation's military intervention in Afghanistan.

When the President annunced the partial grain embargo, be said food aid to poor countries would be expanded. The Food For Peace section of Saturday's announcement redeemed that pledge. Carter's corn-purchase decisinn was prompted, bowever, by the refusal of Longshoremen at Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico coast ports to load Soviet-bound grain shipments unaffacted by the embargo. The ILA action affacted some 2.5 million tons of grain, administration officials have estimated.

The President asked the 1LA to lift the boycott, but the union had refused to do so by midday Saturday.

Elzenstat said Carter's latest moves will not boost the cost of federal outlays related to the grain embargo, beyond an earlier overall estimate of $2.5 billion to $3 billion.

MIDAS TRAIL: The line of gold buyers stretches for at least 100 yards estaids the London office of gold dealer, Johnson Matthey, at the price of gold continues to skyrocket to record levels. Last week prices broke the $ 500 an ounce barrier and market experts are predicting $ 1,000 an ounce gold in the near future.

'Reserves must be considerable'

Grain embargo won't cause Soviet suffering

MOSCOW, Jan. 20 (AP) - President Jimmy Carter's embargn on grain sales to the Soviet Union, a dramatic punitive measure designed to shrink Soviet consumers' meat supplies, probably won't hurt the Russians as much as the administration bad boped.

Some Western agriculture specialists here say the Soviets could be forced to cut meat production this year by as much as 10 per cent for lack of fodder. They said that in the worst case, beef, park and paultry output could fall fram 15.3 million metric tons last year to about 13.77 million tons this year. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds. . But they say the estimate is based upon what the Soviet agricultural directors did in 1976 after the 1975 crop failure, when only 140.1 million metric tons of grain were bar-

The poor hervest last year, the worst since 1975, was 179 million tons, nearly 40 million tons more.

The worst-case prediction also fails to fully necount for unknown Soviet grain reserves — which must be considerable after 1978's record crop - 237 million tons.

Western experts say the Soviets abviously saved a considerable amount of that record, because meat production in 1979 - when the record harvest became available to livestock was about the same as the year before.

"The Soviet people will not be bungry, for the U.S.S.R. puts aside twice as much wheat for food as the United States, satisfying the population's requirements even in the years of the poorest barvests," the Soviet Novosti news agency wrote last week.

Soviet economic planners also are likely to turn to other sources for grain imports. Argentine and Brazil are showing signs of not cooperating with Carter's embargo. Those countries indicate they plan to sell surplus grain in the world market regardless of which country wants to buy. Carter had hoped to damage the Kremlin leadership's credibility with Soviet citizens by refusing to sell 17 million metric tons of grain to Russia, Before the Jan, 4 embargo, the United States was prepared to sell the Soviets 25 million tons of grain this year. Instead, American farmers will be shipping nnly 8 million tons to Russia, in accordance with the five-year U.S.-Soviet grain deal that expires Sept. 31, 1981.

Tha Soviets still will get annther 9 million metrie tons of grain from Argentina, Australia, Canada and Common Market: countries this year in line with previous con-

This all means the guaranteed Soviet grain imports for 1980 will be halved from 34 million tons unless other sources such as Argentina fill the gap, which they are likely to do to

But any shortfall in exports will burt Soviet government plans to boost the per capita meat consumption, reportedly the lowest in Eastern Europe after Romania.

The per capita consumption in the Soviet Union is estimated at 56 kilograms (123.2 pounds) annually. For comparison, the U.S. figure is roughly 94 kilograms (206.8

Turkey plans low value lira, gas price hike

ANKARA, Jan. 20 (R) - Turkey will announce a package of economic measures within the next few days, including a devaluatinn of the lira and big price rises for petrol and other consumer goods, finance ministry sources said Saturday.

The package is almed largely at enticing foreign capital into Turkey to pay its huge oil import bills and will demonstrate the liberal economic policies of the two-month-old government of Suleyman Demirel, they said.

The government expected the measures would encourage the International Manetary Fund (IMF) to release pledged credits to Turkey, held up apparently because of the country's political and economic uncertainty. the sources said.

That, in turn, should encourage Western banks and governments to hand over cash aid promised last year and considered vital to Turkey's economic survival, they added.

The sources said the package had been ready for several weeks, but did not say wby its annuncement had been delayed.

Western diplomats said an open letter from the country's military chiefs earlier this month, criticizing the natinn's politicians, had held up publication of the measures.

The sources declined to give figures but the package is expected to abolish a two-tier exchange rate against the dollar, established by the government of Bulent Ecevit last June and giving a different rate for oil imports.

Bankers here tald Reuters the devaluation nf the present general rate nf 47 Turkish lira to nne dollar was expected in be at least 20

The consumer prices of petrol, diesel and fuel oil were expected to rise by at least 20 per cent, they added.

The finance ministry snurces said at least 100 billion lira (now about $2.1 billion) would be added to the treasury by rescinding state credits to the loss-making nadonalized Industries and by cutting state subsidies on

Opening lead

Here is a hand played in an international tournament by the Polish star, Janusz Polec. He got to six spades after East ned with a preemptive two

West led the queen of hearts and Polec could see at once that the slam depended upon ng only one club trick, not two. The normal way playing the club combination wa is to lead a low club to dummy's queen and finesse

But Polec decided that West was more likely to have the jack of clubs than East, and accordingly he adopted an entirely different line of play. He ruffed the heart lead and drew three rounds of trumps, discarding a club from dummy after West had discarded a heart.

Polec then played the A-Q-J of diamonds, overtaking the jack with the king! He next ruffed a heart in his hand, returned to dummy by playing his four of diamonds to the seven, and ruffed dummy's

By this time Polec had achieved the end position he had sought to arrange from the start. He had used up all his trumps and all his diamonds in order to come down to only three cards, the K-10-2 of clubs. West, in the meantime, was left with three cards consisting of the A-J-8 of clubs, and dummy had the Q-

Polec now led the king of clubs and West found himself caught on the horns of a dilemma. If he ducked the king, declarer would simply lead another club to make the slam, Actually West took the king with the ace and returned a low club, hoping to find his partner with the ten. But this hope did not materialize and Polec won the last two tricks with the ten and queen of

A few years back, a friend presented me with an instructive gift. It was a paper-weight, i.e., something you cannot belp of a motto for me. I gradually began to Those who are generous with their -

Khomeini agrees to amendment

Plan would give Sunnis equal status

TEHRAN, Jan. 20 (R) - Ayatollah Khomeini bas approved plans to amend Iran's strict Islamic constitution to allow the Sunni branch of Islam equal status with the country's majority Shi ite sect, state radio reported Sunday.

The revolutionary leader's statement, saying he had no objection to such an ameodment being submitted to a referendum, represents a major concession to the Sunni groups which have been active in aotigovernment revolts in Irao's Kurdisb. Baluchi and Turkoman regions.

The Ayarollah's message was in reply to recommendations by former Foreign Minister Ibrahim Yazdi, who has headed special missions to several areas where clashes between Shi ites and Sunnis have occured.

Yazdi proposed amending Article 12 of the constitution which states: "The official religion of Iran is Islam of the Shi ite seet. This principle is eternal and unchangeable."

In reply, Khomeini wrote: "Amending this and some other articles which will be written in the form of an amendment to the constitution and approving such changes is in the sphere of authority of the nation and will be put to a referendum.

"I consider there to be no objection to this on my part."

It was not clear what other articles of the constitution might be amended, but the various regional groups have also demanded greater local self-rule, Yazdi reported to Khomeini after his trip to Sietan and Baluchistan, a predominantly Sunni provioce of southeast Iran, that local leaders wanted Article 12 ameoded.

Yazdi's letter said that the ruliog revolutionary council had unanimously approved the proposals 10 amend the coo-stitution after Khomeini accepted his report. If approved at a referendum, the amendment would be by far the biggest concession made to the regions since last February's

Meanwhile, revolutionary authorities in the northwestern city of Tabriz were bolding 25 air force men on charges of plotting a coup, the director of Tabriz jail said.

Hassan Yazdani said the officers and NCO's were arrested io connection with recent clashes in Tabriz between government supporters and militants of the opposition Moslem People's Republican Party (MPRP).

Those arrested confessed to the charges, which include providing arms and ammunition to the MPRP. They promised they would stage a coup, Yazdani said.

He did not give details of how the alleged coup was to have been carried out.

TEHRAN, Jan. 20 (R) — Only a few American journalists were left in Iran Sun-

Almost all of the 86 stringers and press correspondents were ordered to leave Friday for alleged biased reporting of the Islamic revolution.

A handful of resident journalists, mostly from the American news agencies, were allowed to stay for up to three weeks to finish up administrative affairs but they are forbidden to send reports. Iran's ruling revolutionary council, charging that the Americans were obsessed with the occupation of the U.S. Embassy and the 49 hostages held there by radical Muslim students, decide on the expulsion last Monday.

month at least 10 people were killed and more than 100 wounded. After a revolutionary guard assault on the local MPRP headquarters 11 of its militants were executed.

The evening newspaper Keyhan quoted the bead of the Tabriz Islamic tribunal, Hojatoleslam Seyyed Hossen Mussavi, as saying 50 officers and NCO's at the air base had been involved in a plot.

Up to 30 were still being sought and all would be tried in a special court of army and religious judges, be was quoted as saying. An Islamic judge was going from the boly city of Qom to chair the trials.

Wall posters which went up around Tehran University Saturday signed by a variety of far-left groups, said a number of retired air force officers bad been involved in plotting a U.S.-based coup in connivance with mem-

With less than a week to go to the first round of the presidential elections, the major candidates were faced Saturday with the threat of a boycott in Iran's ethnic border regions.

The threat stemmed from an order by Khomeini barring the candidacy of those who bad not voted in favor of the new constitution, which gives him sweeping powers.

The order effectively debarred Massoud

He bad already received the backing of Kurds, Turkomans and Baluchis, all of whom are predominantly Orthodox Sunnis.

Tito health report delayed; nation stages show of force

BELGRADE, Jan. 20 (Agencies) - Offi-cials again delayed word Sunday on the condition of Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito following an announcement that the 87year-old leader required further surgery on his leg.

The official Tanjug news agency said an advisory on Tito's condition was expected "at the same time as yesterday," or around 6 p.m. A team of eight doctors announced Saturday that Tito needed a second operation to

Pentagon believes attack unlikely

Soviet army said weak on Iranian border

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP) - The Soviet army divisions facing Iran's oorthern frontier are well below war strength and would require several weeks to become ready 10 attack, U.S. Pentagon sources have said.

The sources said there are no signs of any call-up of Russian army reservists on a mass scale to prepare for any such attack into Iran or to take advantage of any disarray in Yugoslavia in the event President Josip Broz Tito U.S. defense officials report that about 13

Soviet motorized rifle divisions in the Transcaucasus area along the northern Soviet-Iranian border total only about 50,000 to 60,000 men. These officials, declining to be identified publicly, described those divisions as being in "a low mobilization status."

They estimated that these divisions would bave to be built up to about three times their present strength and that this would take a number of weeks.

Despite attention focused on two Soviet divisions operating in western Afghanistan some 120 k.m. from the Iranian border. Defense Department officials discount the likelihood of any major Russian assault from that direction. Instead, they say, the area to watch closely for a possible threat to invade Iran is what they call the "natural corridor" from the Transcaucasus region of the Soviet Union north of Iran.

Attrack from this quarter would be the most logical one to strike at Tebran or the key Iranian oil fields in the Gulf area.

In Central Europe, Pentagon officials said, they have been aware for some time that the Russian-led Warsaw Pact armies would be conducting field maneuvers around this period and that they are not concerned that such exercises, now in progress in Hungary and elsewhere in Eastern Europe, portend a possible offensive into Yugoslavia. Significantly, in the view of U.S. military officials, the Afghan army is taking a beating from the rebels in northeast Afgbanistan and there are indications the Soviets may have to commit as many as 4,000 to 5,000 troops against the rebels in that area.

Up to now, the Russian army bas served primarily to occupy Afghan cities, to gain control of the country's meager road network and to support the Afghan government

On the rebel side, officials, said, there does not yet appear to be any command organization that would confront the Russians and the Pro-Soviet leadership in Kabul with a longterm problem.

According to Pentagon officials, the Russians may either bring in additional troops beyond the 72,000 they now are estimated to have committed to Afghanistan, or attempt to wear down the guerrillas over a long winter campaign, boping the rebels will become dis-
